

John Hazewinkel, JD

John Hazewinkel coordinates health information technology (HIT) policy activities for the Institute of Health Care Studies at Michigan State University. His work has supported the State of Michigan's health information exchange project (the Michigan Health Information Network, or MiHIN), the state regional HIT extension center (the Michigan Center for Effective IT Adoption), the Detroit Beacon Project, the Capital Area Regional Health Information Organization (CARHIO), and the Michigan Medicaid electronic health records incentive workgroup.

He coordinates the Michigan Coalition for Health information Technology and its HIT workforce and research and development teams. He also serves as the chair of the Technology Subcommittee, Substantive Law Committee of the Health Law Section in the State Bar of Michigan and is an adjunct instructor in the MSU Master of Public Health program.

John holds a BA in International Economics and Cultural Affairs from Valparaiso University, a Master of Public Affairs degree from Indiana University (Northwest) and a Juris Doctor from the MSU College of Law.